About Kalayaan

Kalayaan is a London-based human rights charity that works to provide practical advice and support to, as well as campaign with and for, the rights of migrant domestic workers in the UK. Due to the under-regulated nature of domestic work and the very restrictive ODW visa, many workers are subject to abuse, control, non-payment of wages, and in the most extreme cases, human trafficking for domestic servitude.

As part of Kalayaan's commitment to improving the lives of domestic workers, we run English classes to enable our clients to communicate well, integrate into society, understand their rights and to feel more empowered. Typically migrant domestic workers work long hours and their only day off is on a Sunday, therefore these classes are also an opportunity for students to socialise.

Each class is taught by one teacher who is supported by one or two teaching assistants. Volunteers alternate on a weekly basis, so the commitment will be every other Sunday during school terms, with no classes at half terms. Lesson plans will be provided by the English class coordinator. However, volunteers are welcome to use their own plans after liaising with the coordinator, or to adapt the plan provided as they wish.

We are particularly looking for volunteers with experience of teaching adults at a Pre-Entry level and of teaching adults who have limited literacy in their native language. The class levels range from Pre-Entry to roughly Entry Level 1.
